Capturing webpages to PDF

It was twenty years ago that I first bought the retail version of Adobe Acrobat* and proceeded to convert all of the articles*on my Blue Guitar website into PDF format. They had been in HTML 2.0 format which required that any included image files be located in the same folder. With the PDF format all of the necessary files could be compiled into a single file.

I also used the retail version of Acrobat to convert webpages into PDF files to save their content at a particular time forever — very important*to me as unscrupulous websites could edit them to rewrite history so to speak.* On a less serious note I would save some of the humorous eBay listings like Elian's Air Guitar and Robert Johnson's Soul as well as Rip Glitter's reviews on Harmony Central, the Onion article on manic-depressive Tom Rusek and the now-famous Scandinavian collection of Amp Porn pictures...
